

Progressive Economy

Launched in February 2011, ProgressiveEconomy is a project of the GlobalWorks Foundation, a non-profit 501(c)(3) joined in the campaign to eliminate global poverty and based in Washington DC. Directed by Ed Gresser, ProgressiveEconomy promotes ideas that are pro-growth and pro-jobs, pro-poor and pro-shopper, and pro-security, and founded upon commitment to:

- American leadership for open markets and a strong international trading system;
- An export-oriented growth strategy focused on major trading partners and industries to restore America's economic health and rebuild high-quality employment;
- Reforms in the U.S. trade regime to reduce tariffs on home goods and thus ease the cost of living for low-income American families, help poor countries succeed, and support America's national security;
- Active government policies at home and abroad to improve competitiveness, public health, education and to provide other public goods;
- Improving the base of knowledge of Congress, the press and other stakeholders about America's trade system and current issues.
